

CUMULATIVE INDEX
VOLUMES I-XIII

The following index includes articles and book reviews published in the first twelve volumes of Koinonia: Volume I (1989) through Volume XII (2000). Articles appear in alphabetical order, by author; book reviews are listed alphabetically by book author, with review authors listed in parentheses following the book title.

Included within the index are the central papers and responses of Koinonia's Fall Forums, hosted annually at Princeton Theological Seminary. The subject of these Forums varies from year to year. Since the journal's inception, the Fall Forum issues have addressed feminist biblical hermeneutics (1989), evangelicalism and orthodoxy (1990), sin, shame, and the self (1991), hermeneutics of Mark's Gospel (1992), oppression and hope (1993), moral bricolage (1994), African-American "guerilla exegesis" (1995), the work of John Boswell (1996), theodicy and Biblical lament (1997), postfoundational rationality (1998), and, most recently, the Million Man March and globalization.

This index shows the breadth of scholarship in religious studies that Koinonia has worked to present: from Biblical studies to theology, from church history to theology and ethics, from mission and ecumenics to practical theology. In each of these areas we have sought to include work that fosters interdisciplinary discussion and addresses the resources and issues alive in cultural, scholarly, and religious settings around the world. As we continue in our second decade of publishing, we will seek to bring our readers the best in doctoral-level work in religious studies: work that reflects our continuing commitment to interdisciplinary work, scholarly depth, and careful attention to emerging voices in religious studies.
